

Description Of Caseload Types

Caseload - Caseloads determine what individuals users are able to access.

The Therap System has the following types of caseloads : AAIC (All Admitted Individual Caseload), AIC (All Individual Caseload), APC (Auto Program Caseload), Individual Based Caseload and Group Caseload.

In the case of AAIC, This Caseload is automatically created in all provider types. Gives users access to all the individuals that are in Admitted status under a particular provider. A Profile with an AAIC cannot have other Caseloads added to it.

In the case of AIC, If you admit at least one individual in the system, the AIC (All Individual Caseload) will be auto generated. It gives users access to all the individuals that are under a particular provider. Users need not assign a separate Caseload to a user who has the ::AIC:: Caseload as he/she will have access to all the individuals.

In the case of APC, after creating a program in the system, an APC (Auto Program Caseload) will be auto generated for that program.

AAIC, AIC and APC types are created for you automatically by the system. In the cases of Individual or Group Caseload, users assigned with the Caseload role can create Individual or Group Caseloads if needed.
